

Community School of the Arts' Production of How To Eat Like A Child (and Other Lessons In NOT Being A Grown-Up)

For immediate release: April 28, 2009

Do you remember all the lessons learned as a child? Well, a crash course is on its way to a theater near you on all the essential skills of childhood. A musical comedy just for kids – and anyone who was once a kid! – comes to the Farish Center on the campus of Independent Day School – Corbett Campus in May.

Students from the Community School of the Arts perform
How To Eat Like a Child (and Other Lessons in NOT Being a Grown-Up) on:
Saturday, May 23rd at 1PM
Sunday, May 24th at 1 PM

Independent Day School is located in Original Carrollwood at 12015 Orange Grove Drive Tampa, FL 33618.

Universal and timeless, screenwriter and author Delia Ephron's How to Eat Like a Child is a delightful romp through the joys – and tricky ploys – of childhood. Performers offer up a series of 23 “lessons,” taught through songs and skits, on key topics: how to beg for a dog, how to torture your sister, how to respond after being sent to your room, how to stay home from school, and how to watch more television.

After the giggles of recognition have subsided, one thing will be very clear: all adults are kids in grown-ups' clothing.

Community School of the Arts has rounded up a cast of obvious experts in the various subjects who seem only too eager to share their accumulated knowledge with the audience members. In fact, so natural are they in the parts they play, there is no need for role names. All actors merely play themselves!

The show is directed by Jennifer Barnekow with musical direction by Jennifer John-Venturini. Tickets are $5 for everyone and may be purchased at the door. The Farish Center is wheelchair accessible and there is plenty of parking for all.

The mission of the Community School of the Arts is to provide creative growth opportunities for children, teens and adults. The arts are brought to life through lessons, performance and exposure to professional performances. Community School of the Arts offers the Greater Tampa Community the highest quality instruction available.
